Cost-Sharing on Proposal Submission

Summary/Proposal: Documenting cost sharing on proposals

Cost-sharing (also called matching) should be included in the budget accompanying a proposal submission only if such arrangements are required or strongly encouraged by the sponsor’s program guidelines. During the early stages of proposal development, a prospective Principal Investigator/Project Director anticipating a need for cost-sharing should work closely with Office of Research and Sponsored Programs (ORSP) staff to identify sources for cost-sharing and should begin the process of securing agreements to cost-share and making arrangements for documentation.

All University cost-sharing commitments must be entered and approved by all cognizant officials on the UM Transmittal Sheet for the proposal and for any subsequent revisions to the proposal.

If the project is funded, the cost-sharing included in the final approved budget (as reflected on the final approved Transmittal Sheet) must be fully documented throughout the program period.
